NUMBER 28. JULY 15, 1910, NORWAY, MAINE. VOLUME XLI.

United Sunday School Field Day.

The Methodist Church of Norway Won the Pennant and Banner.

The second annual Sunday School Field Day for the schools of Oxford County, was held at the Fair Grounds, Tuesday. The weather was all that could be wished for; a cool breeze swept across the grounds all day, making it a nice cool place to spend a day's outing.

The attendance was not quite as large as last year, but there was somewhere in the vicinity of a five hundred people present during the day.

The different schools in this section have been practicing and getting in time for the sports for some time past. The interest shown by the Sunday Schools has been exceptionally good, and through the persistant efforts of the officers, was gained the success of the day.

The sports were the principal feature of the day, and were watched with great interest by the spectarors from the grand stand, and as the boys neared the home line in the races, cheers and applause coming from the grandstand were much in evidence.

Lumley Castle Band of South Paris, furnished the music for the day.

At noon a picnic dinner was eaten under the pines and on the grandstand. Many from the surrounding towns who were unable to attend all day, were there for the picnic dinner.

During the forenoon a ball game was played between the Norway Methodist team and the South Paris team, with a 3 to 0 in favor of the Norway Methodist team. There was also a second game played, Norway Universalist team vs the Norway Congregational team, with a score of 6 to 0 in favor of the Congregational team.

In the afternoon a third game was played between the winning teams at the morning games. The Norway Methodist vs the Norway Congregational and wound up with a score of 14 to 3 in favor of the Methodist team.

The Methodist church of Norway were the winners of the day and they did some fine work throughout, and were well represented in all the sports. The Methodist track team won points and were awarded the banner, and they also won the penant for the good playing at the ball games.

The Methodist boys, the winners of the day, are planning to hold a banquet at the Beals House, next Wednesday evening.

Banquet at Congregational Church.

Tuesday evening after the sports and a pleasant day spent at the fair grounds a laymen's banquet was given in the dining hall at the Congregational church.

The supper, a fine baked bean, cold meats, pastry and salad supper was served by the ladies circle. The tables were attractively decorated. There were about 60 men present.

After the supper all adjourned to the vestry where the evening's program was given. The male quartet of the Methodist church, consisting of Rev. B. C. Wentworth, S. C. Foster, George K. Robinson and O. P. Brooks, gave several fine selections including, "Nearer My God to Thee," "Speed Away" and "We're Drifting Down the Stream."

Rev. R. A. Colpitts of Portland was engaged as the speaker of the evening but owing to the illness of his wife he was unable to attend. Mr. Colpitts secured a substitute, Rev. David Nelson of South Portland, who was the speaker of the evening. Rev. Mr. Nelson spoke on "Organized Bible Classes" and said in part; "We should be glad we are men. Man is God's greatest creation, and thank God we are not angels, are not brutes, but that we are men.

This layman's movement is a new movement and there never were so many men in the churches as now. There is no better time than now to catch the spirit and assist in this good work. Do not try to shift the work onto the women. Things have been left for the women and they have done it, but this is the time when masculine efforts are needed in the church.

Men are interested and desire to learn of Jesus Christ and the best way to interest them is in the organized class. Extend to them a hearty welcome and make them feel that they are welcome. Invite them personally to attend the class, give them a part to do in the work and make the class pleasant.

Advertise your class and give an uplift to the man when he is down.

The coming generation need your example. Organize your classes if you have not already, get men to come into the class and set examples for this rising generation, have some definite aim, try to get everyone to attend church and Sunday school and help each other.

Short remarks along the lines of Organized class work were made by Rev. E. A. Davis, pastor of the South Paris, Baptist church, Rev. M. C. Ward, pastor of the Norway Universalist church, Rev. T. F. Keuley, pastor of the South Paris, M. E. church and Phillip Stone of Warren, Mass., and Rev. A. T. McWhorter pastor of the Congregational church at South Paris.

A vote of thanks were extended the quartet for the fine music furnished during the evening, and to Rev. Mr. Nelson for his address. It was also voted to extend expressions of sympathy to Rev. Mr. Colpitts on accounts of the serious illness of Mrs. Colpitts.

Mrs. Amos French.

Mrs. Lavinia (Dunn) French died at her home at North Norway, Friday, July 1, of pneumonia after an illness of only four days.

Mrs. French was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Elbridge Dunn and was born at Pigeon Hill 69 years ago. She lived at different places where her father preached and it was while they were on the North Norway circuit that she formed the acquaintance of her future husband. With the coming fall they had been married fifty-three years. They were married Nov. 5, 1857.

Besides her husband she leaves four children, Mrs. Carrie E. Kingman of Waterford, Chester G. French of Norway, Aldro A. French of Attleboro, Mass., and Mrs. Angie L. Flint of North Norway. The oldest son died when four years old. She also leaves brothers, sisters and many relatives.

Mrs. French was a devoted Christian and a firm believer in the Advent faith, and one whose works spoke for her faith at home and among her acquaintances and friends.

The funeral was from their late home where they had lived so many years, Monday, July 4. Rev. B. C. Wentworth spoke words of comfort to the sorrowing ones and sang her favorite hymns at the service at the house; also at the Chapel cemetery where she was laid to rest. The bearers were her sons and her daughters' husbands, William Kingman and Leslie Flint.

She was a great lover of flowers and those that were placed near her casket and afterwards on her grave were the blossoms she had watched and loved and tended.

A. P. Bassett has gone to his camp at Lovell to do his haying.

Carrol Bartlett is working for J. A. Roberts at Norway Lake.

Fred A. Dunn is at the Central Maine General hospital, at Lewiston.

Beryl Young is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Hammond, at Bethel for two weeks.

Mary E. Shurtleff is visiting at Mrs. Hattie Small's for the rest of the summer.

Mrs. Nellie Taylor and son Maurice are visiting her cousin, L. M. Longley and family.

O. M. Cummings is something of a farmer as well as a livery man. We recently visited his fields near R. K. Morrill's and inspected the grass. It is good and stout and a lot of it. Probably 15 such loads as Rufe Morrill hauls and it will crowd Cummings' stable to hold it. The "Hungarian" he will have to sell to Morrill. Mr. Cummings says he has hurt his land by using shavings for bedding but this year's crop of grass don't show it.

Three delegates of the Norway Y. P. C. U. have been at the National convention at New York City the past week, the president, Harlow D. Adkins; the State treasurer, Abner H. Mann, and W. Mayford Mann. Next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, in the Norway Universalist vestry, these delegates are expected to give a stirring report of the convention and trip. A general invitation is extended to everyone to be present.

Next Sunday is the last of services at the Universalist church before the pastor starts on his vacation. He will spend it with his family at Maplecroft Farm, the home of Mrs. Ward's father, John H. Harmon, at Buxton. This is about 15 miles from Portland, and the farm has a telephone on the Saco Valley exchange so Mr. Ward expects to be in communication with the Norway people. Mr. Ward expects to leave next Tuesday for Buxton.

Clarence Harry Grover.

Clarence Harry Grover, aged 24 years, 8 months, 11 days, son of Simon and Matilda (Hapgood) Grover, died at the home of his parents on Fair street, July 9th, after an illness of four weeks. With great patience he bore his sufferings which at all times were very severe, the trouble being in the head, called the inner ear. He was admitted to the C. M. G. hospital, Lewiston, for treatment but nothing could be done for him there. He was tenderly cared for by his wife, parents, and brothers and their wives, everything being done that could possibly relieve his pain and make him comfortable, all the local doctors being called. His aunt and uncle Nat. Bennett were with him until the last. The neighbors, also, were very kind.

He was a Son of Veteran, his father serving four years and eight months in the Civil war. He was a faithful son and affectionate husband.

Four of his brothers acted as bearers, Willie, Charlie, Artimus and Alby. Special mention should be made of the faithful attendance of Mrs. Alby Grover at the bedside of her brother-in-law, never leaving him for three days and three nights.

He leaves a wife, a father and mother, seven brothers and one sister to mourn their loss. He had been married but a little more than a year, the same clergyman officiating at the services that married him. It seems very sad to pass from a happy home to the Great Unknown. His burial was at East Stoneham in the family lot, the floral offerings very many.

Simpkins at Opera House.

Joshua Simpkins, a four act New England play, will be presented at Norway Opera House, Wednesday evening, July 20.

The climax of stage realism, it is asserted, has been reached in the presentation of the stirring saw-mill scene in Joshua Simpkins and will be presented in this city by a peculiar mechanical device which has never been introduced here before. This new mill scene is claimed to be a vast improvement over any attempted in a similar line. The company also boast of a splendid orchestra, which is carried complete by the organization, to aid in the proper presentation of the play, which is said to abound with musical and dancing specialties of a high order.

To assist Joshua Simpkins in popularity, a band of music is also carried and a concert is given which is said to be far above anything usually heard with a travelling musical organization. The parade will leave the theatre at the usual time and take the usual route, making a burlesque parade.

Penley's House Burned.

About 4.30 Tuesday afternoon a fire started in the stable at Charles Freeman Penley's on High street, and practically destroyed the buildings. The house is a two-story, wooden structure and is situated nearly opposite the Baptist church. The upper rent is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Linden Brackett and seven year old son, while Mr. Penley occupies the lower rent.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Brackett had been calling at J. Hasting Bean's, and later called on Mrs. S. B. Stuart. Her son, Robert, and Leslie Marston, a relative of Mr. Penley's, were playing in the barn. It is supposed that the fire was started from matches which the children said they had been playing with.

When the children saw that a fire had started the little Brackett boy ran to J. H. Bean's for his mother, who had just left, and he told Mr. Bean what had happened. He immediately ran to the church and sounded the bell for help, while the little boy went to Mr. Stuart's for his mother.

In the meantime the little Marston boy ran to the sled factory for his father, and the alarm was sounded from the factory. Mr. Penley, who is hard of hearing, was asleep at the time on the piazza.

With the sounding of the alarm a large crowd gathered, and a part of the household goods were taken from the house and deposited in the park across the street.

The firemen responded promptly and streams of water were turned on, and the buildings in the near vicinity closely watched, and during the course of the fire nearly all the houses on High street caught but not a great deal of damage done as they were quickly extinguished.

The Penley house was insured for $2,750 and is valued some over $3,000. Mrs. Brackett's household goods were also insured.

Mrs. Brackett and family are stopping at S. B. Stuart's till they find a rent.

This is the first fire that has occurred since the new water system has been installed, and it worked to perfection. Seven streams were turned on at one time with pressure enough to cast the stream over the tower. The water lowered a little over a foot in the reservoir.

Littlehale of Portland, who will commence building the new church, which is not to exceed twenty thousand dollars, as soon as the old building is removed.

A very enjoyable reunion of the Shurtleff family was held Saturday. The party included Sylvan Shurtleff, Mrs. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Shurtleff, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shurtleff and daughter, Marjorie, of Portland, Mrs. Nancy Whitman and Nellie L. Whitman of South Paris, and Margaret V. Wright of Nova Scotia, who is with Miss Whitman. Starting after the arrival of the forenoon train they first went to the old house in the King district where Mrs. Whitman and Mr. Shurtleff were born 84 and 82 years ago, then to Paris Hill, where they dined at the Hubbard House, and in the afternoon to West Paris and back to South Paris in time for the afternoon train.

Rev. B. C. Wentworth preached at the Methodist Church Sunday morning, in exchange with Rev. T. N. Kewley. Mr. Wentworth's theme was, "The Bible" and his text was the 105th verse of the 119th Psalm. He spoke of the characteristics of the Bible, its authorship, God, and its antiquity a part of it being written thirty-three hundred years ago and was sixteen hundred years being written. He also spoke of the preservation being written in the two oldest languages, Hebrew and Greek; the unity of the scripture being, composed of sixty-six books, written by forty different writers, from various stations in life, and from different countries, yet with perfect harmony of thought and theme. The book, he declared to be the Wonder Book of the ages the basis of all greatness and prosperity and a true moral guide, the key to immortality and an experimental book adapted to all people and to all classes and to all conditions of life.

Weak Kidneys Make Weak Bodies

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of Norway People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill.

No need to take the statement of Someone living far away as evidence.

Here's a case right in this locality.

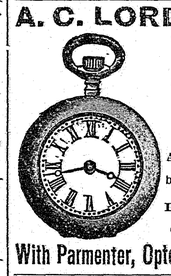

Mrs. Georgia Thayer, Pleasant St., South Paris, Me., says: "I first used Doan's Kidney Pills a short time ago and I can say that they helped me a great deal. My kidneys troubled me for quite a while and I was so favorably impressed with what I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box. I am well pleased with the results of their use and consequently have no hesitation in recommending them to other kidney sufferers." 28-29

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cts. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Back to My Old Home.

Back to the hills of dear old Naples,
Back to the home of my childhood days;
My heart turns back and I often wonder
Why, O why, did I wander away.

The hills and the rocks and the wide spreading maples
Where so oft I reclined 'neath their cool, shady boughs,
I see the cold spring with its pure rippling waters,
Where we stopped to refresh our heated brows.

I can see the wide fields all ready for harvest.
I can hear the soft moo of the cattle near by,
And deep down in my heart there springs forth a wild longing,
And oft for the home of childhood I sigh.

I can see the dear faces of father and mother
With calm patient looks as they toiled the day long;
Ah, who knows the hard battle's they've fought for their loved ones,
While their hearts though heavy seemed bursting with song.

We would sit close together around the bright firelight,
Oft singing or talking, but ever care free;
No thoughts of the future or battles and hardships,
Nor of what might assail us to bid our joy flee.

Long years have now passed and brought forth many changes,
And many a battle of anguish we've fought,
But as we glance back o'er the scenes of our childhood,
We find many joys which can ne'er be forgot.

One dear form has vanished from out the old homestead,
Our dear loving mother, now sleeps 'neath the sod,
But I know that her spirit now dwells with the ransomed
In that City whose builder and maker is God.

When the years shall pass by and our work here is ended,
I hope I may dwell with the ones that I love;
There we'll sing notes of praise to our blessed Redeemer,
United and happy in Heaven above.

MRS. ERNEST MCALLISTER.

The Robin.

When shadows dark have made the world seem dreary and monotonous
And every thing except the sky is blue,
We fancy that the friends we used to know have all forgotten us
And sunny days have all been gotten through
We think that we have reached a point where even bald civility
Is scarce where comradeship was once so free,
Then we get a salutation from that prince of affability,
The robin who is singing on the tree.

He tells a jaunty story of a million welcome visitors
Who come to join and beautify his song.
The ghosts of instrospection slink away like gaunt inquisitors
As hosts of summer sunshine troop along.

He takes the sting from every petty human animosity
Since nature, just as kind as she can be,
Is scattering her treasures with such hearty generosity
For us and the robin in the tree.

Old Time Boat Club.

Sketch of Famous Organization Once in Dixfield.

Written by Emerson P. Bartlett of East Sumner.

Order, please! I have spotted the man who donned the sombrero. Who was that man? Why, it was Walter Eastman bigly honored as captain of the Dixfield boat club 25 years ago, which was one of the leading features of good old Dixfield at that time.

I will write a few lines in regard to the foundation names of its members, its management and a few items of interest, hoping they will be read by at least one of the boys who were at one time heroes in the club early in the fall of '85. We began to hold weekly meetings in Uncle John Griffeth's paint shop near the Webb's river bridge and nearly opposite the old toothpick mill. Here we met as regular as the Odd Fellows did in the Harlow block.

We decided to all pay in to the treasurer, Percy Gammon, five cents apiece each week, which was a plenty for some of us. Our hall was lighted up by our taking turns at bringing a lantern. Well, our dues of the little five cents each week soon began to swell the treasure box and of course it soon had to be invested.

So one day we all dropped in on William Putnam for the purpose of talking on the subject of building a boat for us. Mr. Putnam was always a busy man, but as we boys entered his mill, he dropped everything and gave us his whole attention, and after a short talk we decided to leave the matter with him to build us a boat which in his judgment would be best adapted to our wants and at a cost of twelve dollars, with the understanding that it must be all complete by the time the ice was out of the famous old Androscoggin and Webbs rivers.

There were ten of us if my memory is correct, whose names I will give here, Walter Eastman, Walter Howard, Frank Willoughby, Wade Trask, Carroll Leavitt, Eustace Greenleaf, Charles Pickens, Grant Harlow, Percy Gammon and myself. We were looked upon as a pretty strong organization.

Well, as soon as we had sufficient funds to pay for our boat we began to talk upon the subject of tent and camp utensils.

Now spring was at hand and our boat all ready for business. We tipped it bottom up, put some poles under it crossways and started for Webbs river, just a little way from the mill and not far from the old church on the hill, of which the writer of this article was sexton and hand rung the bell for two years. This was a day long to be remembered. I have watched the launching of several large vessels since, but my memory of setting afloat our little flat bottomed twelve dollar boat when we were all boys shall ever linger.

Our first trip of note was to Webbs river falls to a little camp above the falls. We did not have our tent or cooking utensils then, so we each carried a basket of provisions all cooked. We went up Saturday night and came back Monday morning. Now that the boat was paid for, our fifty cents per week counted up fast and all were getting anxious, so at one of our weekly meetings, we voted to raise 50 cents each inside of 30 days, beside our regular weekly dues, which would amount to about sixteen dollars, what we had decided to pay for our tent.

So when a month rolled along all paid in fifty cents and with the rest we had in the treasury, we sent to John P. Lovell of Boston for our tent and about a month later we bought cooking utensils of Lee Dillingham of Dixfield and now we were well equipped for any length of a camping trip, boat made a weekly trip to Webbs River falls the rest of the season and the following summer and after that our members began to scatter far and near, one in Boston, one in Rhode Island one in Chicago, one in Fort Bayard, New Mexico and one in California, and I have heard of only one of these boys' deaths, which was Grant Harlow, one of my very closest companions.

And now that the Dixfield Boat club is among the things that were, Webb river runs just the same, but whether the little camp above the falls, where I have spent many happy days, nights and weeks, is still standing, I know not.—Maine Woods.

Annual Outing Maine Electric Association.

The annual outing of the Maine Electric Association will be held at Portland, July 28 29, and the affair promises to be a great success this year.

The headquarters of the association will be at the Falmouth Hotel and a portion of the time will be devoted to the business meeting. The association is one of the most progressive in the State and already has a reputation in distant points for the excellent work it has accomplished.

It has members from all points of the State, the membership being divided into different classes according to their connection to the company to which they are affiliated. Its purpose is to bring the members more closely together for the mutual benefit of all and so far has accomplished much. It is the desire of the officers to have every electrician in the State enrolled as soon as possible, no matter what branch of the electrical line they may pursue.

One day of the outing will be devoted to a sail down the bay with a shore dinner on the return trip.

Examinations for State Certificates of Superintendence Grade.

The annual examination of candidates for State certificates of superintendence grade will be held at Augusta, Friday July 29, 1910 at 8.15 o'clock a. m.

Persons who wish to take this examination and thereby to qualify for the position of superintendents of town comprising school unions, should apply for registering blanks and circulars of information.

Oddities of various kinds are arising continually, but here is one that is without doubt the limit. Atillio Zanardi and Eugene Vianello are touring the world in a barrel. They have so far traveled through England, France, Italy, Belgium Switzerland and Holland in this unique contrivance. The barrel in which these odd tourists travel is large enough to accommodate two men, two dogs and all the paraphernelia necessary for good housekeeping. The bunk is so arranged that it always remains upright when the "barrelled Pullman" moves forward; nothing turns upside down. The men get inside and roll themselves from place to place. Their next move will be to Russia and thence across the continent to the Siberian wilderness into Asia. They started from Venice on June 20, 1909. They calculate that it will take them twelve years to complete their journey across the world.

Some of The Lost Arts.

It is said that the art of luminous painting was known to the Japanese as long ago as A. D. 976, in the dynasty of the emperor Tai Tsung of the Sung dynasty, who had in his possessions a picture painted by one Su Ngoh that was a spirited affair, being nothing more or less, however, than a picture of an ox that every day left the picture frame to graze and then returned to the frame to sleep at night. This thing worried the emperor, as it seemed to his mind more realistic than was necessary in just a common picture of a common ox, so he made numerous inquiries among his subjects as to why the ox, being only a picture, daily went out to graze.

None of the people, of course, could explain the phenomenon, and the emperor finally appealed to a certain wise Buddhist priest, who said that the Japanese painter had known of an ancient secret and applied it to his art in painting the picture. It really was nothing, explained the learned priest, more than that the artist had found some nacreous substance within the flesh of a certain kind of oyster that could be picked up among the rocks when the tide was low. This substance was dried and then ground into the color material, and pictures painted with these colors were invisible by day and luminous by night, so the secret was that during the day the figure of the ox was not visible, and it was therefore said that it left the frame to go grazing.

History relates that during the age of Tiberius, a Roman workman who had been banished, was allowed to return to Rome, which he did, bringing with him a glass cup—a really wonderful cup, for he dashed it upon the pavement and it was not broken by the fall, although dented, but with a hammer he easily bent it into shape again. It was brilliant, transparent, but not brittle. It is further stated that the Romans were much interested, and learned that the man had obtained the cup from the Aarbians, who are wonderful chemists. In the books of that long-ago time there is a glass mentioned that, if supported by one end, by its own weight would in a day dwindle down to a fine line, and could be curved around the wrist like a bracelet.

The glassblowers of ancient Thebes are known to have been far in advance of the most proficient craftsmen of our day of "progress," some 4,000 years later. They were well acquainted with the art of staining glass, and are known to have produced that article in great profusion and perfection. Rosellini tells of a piece of stained glass known to be 4,000 years old, which displayed artistic taste of high order, both in tint and design. In this specimen the color is struck through the vitrified structure, and he mentions other designs stuck entirely in pieces from one-half to three-quarters of an inch thick, the color being perfectly incorporated with the structure of the piece and exactly the same on both sides.

The priests of Ptah at Memphis were adepts in the glassworker's art, and not only did they have manufactories for the common crystal varieties, but they had learned the vitrifying of the different colors and the imitating of precious stones to perfection. Their imitations of the amethyst and of the various other colored gems were so like the real article that even now after they have lain in the sands of the desert from 2,000 to 4,000 years, it takes an expert to tell them from the geniune. It is known also that they used the diamond for cutting and engraving glass, and in the British museum there is a beautiful piece of stained glass with an engraved emblazonment of the monarch Thotmes III, who lived over 3,400 years ago.

Proclus, who had a fame greater than Archimedes as a mathematician, is credited with having made a burning glass during the reign of Anastasium Dicorus which was of such remarkable efficacy that at a great distance he set fire to and destroyed the ships of the Mysian and Thracian fleets that had blockaded Byzantium.

The Damascus blades, those marvels of perfect steel, have never been equalled, and those in use during the crusades, 800 years ago, are today "good as new." In London there is one on exhibition that can be put in a scabbard almost as crooked as a corkscrew, and bent every way without breaking. The point of this sword can be made to touch the hilt.

The mysticism of this oriental steel has long been a subject for writers, and the poets have sung its praises. Sir Walter Scott, in his "Talisman," describes a meeting between Richard Coeur de Lion and Saladin, wherin Saladin asks Richard to show him the wonderful strength for which he is noted, and the Norman monarch responds by severing a bar of iron which lies on the floor of the tent. Saladin says that he "could not do that," but he takes an elderdown pillow from a couch and, drawing his keen blade across it, it falls in two pieces.

At this feat Richard says: "This is the black art; it is magic; you cannot cut that which has no resistance." Saladin, to show him that such is not the case, takes his scarf from his shoulders, which is so light that it almost floats in the air and, tossing it, severs it before it can descend. Some people have thought that Scott exaggerated just a little here, but such probably is not the case, for it has been told by a recent traveller that he once saw a man in Calcutta throw a handful of silk floss in the air and a Hindoo promptly severed it with his saber.

Gunpowder was known to the Romans, though they only used it for fireworks; but in one particular we are yet far behind, for the secret of the terrible and destructive Greek fire has been lost altogether.

Another "lost art" although put to use on a modern invention, is that displayed in the making of a remarkable clock now owned by a Hindoo prince. For perfection and ingenuity this clock takes rank as the "strangest piece of machinery in India." Near the dial of an ordinary looking clock is a gong hung on poles, while underneath, scattered on the base plate of the clock, is a pile of small artifical human skulls, ribs, arms and legs, the whole number of bones in the pile being equal to the number of bones in twelve human skeletons. When the hands of the clock indicate the hour of 1, the number of bones to form a complete human skeleton come together with a snap, and by some mechanical contrivance the skeleton springs up to the gong, and strikes one blow. This finished, it returns to the pile and again falls to pieces.

When 2 o'clock comes two skeletons get up and strike, while at the hours of noon and midnight the entire heap springs up in the shape of twelve skeletons and strike, each one after the other a blow on the gong and then fall to pieces as before.

The ancients had a marvelous knowledge of colors. Excavations in Assyria and Egypt have brought to light colorings that it is impossible to duplicate today. At Nineveh the monochrome pictures which represented the Chaldeans on the wall are said by Gesenius, the Septuagint, and the Vulgate to have been painted with a sinoper or rubrica, a native early oxide much like our Indian red, while both the English versions of the Bible now in use, as well as the rabbis, translate the word as "shashar" (Jeremiah xxii., 14), or vermilion. At Khorsabad it appears that the red approached that bright color, but at Nimrod the sculptures exhibit a bright crimson or lake tint—and our painters have not been able to duplicate either.

Wether in ancient times better roads and pavements were built than at present, or whether only the best remains is uncertain, but is also most certain that some of the remains of such structures found in Rome, for instance, evince engineering skill and perfection of work to a high degree. These roads were laid out carefully and excavated to solid ground.

This was costly work, to be sure, the Appian Way, about 130 miles in length, nearly exhausted the Roman treasury—but it was enduring as nature's own work. In Peru and Central America the Spaniards found remains of roads 1,500 to 2,000 miles long which, examination shows, were built of heavy flags of firestone, and, in some parts at least, covered with a bituminous cement which time had made harder than stone itself. The roads of modern times lack most of the elements of durability which these ancient-made ones possessed, and, consequently, wear out in a short time.

There never was a time when there was a better chance to display what is usually known as good judgment in farm operations than the present season, and many a man who has supposed that he was all sound and his judgment good, has been at a loss to know which way to turn and what to do. In several cases we have heard of men who have a good clover crop, who have been able to cut the clover, plow up the ground and plant a crop of potatoes, doing it before July came in. Hundreds of acres have been treated this, way thus getting two crops in a single year, and the chances are more than even that they will be good, crops too. This is a clover year and there is no reason why potatoes planted the last of June on good rich clover soil, will not yeild abundantly.

Fifth Avenue Teas
New York's Famous Teas

When you drink "Fifth Avenue" Teas you will marvel at their delicacy of flavor and rose-like bouquet. You will be surprised at their nerve-soothing effect. Their comforting influence.
We use only the first pickings—flowery pekoe from top leaves so young as to be still covered with "down."
But it is these rare leaves that give "Fifth Avenue" Teas their distinctive characteristics of healthfulness, flavor and goodness. It is these leaves that make our teas the favorite with discriminating tea drinkers.
Teas made from the coarse lower leaves lack the inimitable flavor and exquisite fragrance of "Fifth Avenue" Teas. They lack the sharp tonic properties and nerve soothing effects.

Spraying the Trees.

A thorough spraying of the trees at any time before the middle of August directing the spray to the under side of leaves where the eggs are deposited by the moth, will be effectual.

Use lead arsenate, three pounds to 50 gallons of water. This poison will adhere to the leaves for a long time so that even if applied now it will remain until after the last egg cluster has hatched.

When little caterpillers being to feed they will be easily destroyed by the poison before they can begin their nests.

This treatment will save the expense of the winter removal of the nests, which amounts to thousands of dollars, and give added health to the trees.

When Meals Lasted All Day.

The people who are telling others that they will escape from all bodily ills if they will confine themselves to two meals a day think they have invented a new custom. They don't know that 400 years ago two meals a day was a common programme, at least in some quarters.

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly, in describing sixteenth century inns, says that among travellers in those days eating resolved itself into two meals a day, but that most of them had no more than that at home. However, as a meal seemed to be a continuous performance, lasting pretty much all day, the hardships of travel must not be exaggerated.

At Berne there was a law against sitting at table more than five hours; at Bale, from 10 A. M. to 6 P. M. was the maximum permitted, but the town council was unable to practice its own counsels of perfection; and on great occasions finished in private.

In Saxony the innkeeper was forbidden to serve more than four dishes at one meal; and there public opinion was some check, insomuch as it was common to compare the Saxon dishes, served as they were, one by one, to the tyrants of Sicily, each of whom was a more fearful monster than his predecessor.

Supervision over the inns was far stricter than at present, especially in Italy. At Lucca and at Florence all the inns were in a single street; and in many towns the new arrival was taken before the authorities by the guard at the gates before he was allowed to choose his inn, to which it would be conducted by a soldier.

At Lucca too was a department of the judiciary which was specially concerned with strangers; and to this the innkeepers had to send a daily report of each guest. Yet to judge by the tourists' accounts the supervision might well have carried further and reports upon the innkeepers required from the tourists.

Such system of double reports would have been a check on the murdering innkeeper, to whom there are occasional references. A landlord at Poitiers was detected in the middle of the seventeenth century; and at Stralesund, so runs another tale, 800 (!) persons had disappeared at one inn. They had reappeared, it is true—but pickled.

Often before the inn came in sight the traveller would see his Italian host. Sometimes the host would have touts as far away as seven or eight leagues to buttonhole foreigners, carry their luggage, promise anything and behave with the utmost servillity—till the morning of departure. But with all this, to expect too much and it was desirable for the visitor to carry his own bedding.

In many cases we find the tourist sleeping on a table in his clothes to avoid the dirty bed. Still in Italy, as a rule, you shared your bed with the permanent occupants only. In Spain you were sure to do so; one man, one bed, was the custom there. In Germany the custom was just the reverse; in fact, if the tourist did not find a companion for himself the host chose for him, and his bedfellow might be a carter; all that could be safely prophesied about him was that when he came to bed he would be drunk.

The bed would be one of several in a room, the covering a quilt warm enough to be too warm for summer and narrow enough to leave one side of each person exposed in winter. That is, supposing there were beds.

How to Tell Good Wine.

The connoisseur tells good wine from bad by taste alone, but most men are not connoisseurs, and to most the following easier methods, guaranteed by an expert, prove useful:

The artificial coloring test: Soak a woolen thread in the wine and, removing it, drop on it a little vinegar. If the vinegar turns it bluish the coloring is natural, but if it turns it pink a chemical coloring matter has been used.

If the wine has been fortified with alcohol the addition of cream of tartar in the proportion of one gram to the quart will cause a granular precipitant to settle in the bottom.

If it contains sulphate of potash—a chemical that helps to hide the bad taste of a wine that has turned—a few drops of oxalate of ammonia will quickly produce a deposit.

Where to Place Worked Initials

With some articles there is no question where the initialing should go, such as towels, which should be marked just above the border, and pillow cases which have the lettering an inch beyond the hem at the lower outside corner, or just above the hemstitching. Bolster cases are almost invariably marked in the center, while sheets should be marked in the center just above the hem.

In regard to tablecloths, the two best places are right in the center, or just in front of the carver.

Perhaps the latter is preferable, as the other would compel the housekeeper either to dispense with her centerpiece or to conceal her initial.

Napkins or doilies may be marked in the center or at the edge, just as you prefer, but the same objection to the central position holds good here, says Philadelphia Evening Times.

Some brides like to mark their blankets also, and in this case a bit of satin to match the stripes of the blanket is used, and the monogram done on this in satin stitch.

Paper letters are used to some extent nowadays, these being perforated to permit the needle to pass through. They are basted firmly to the material and then worked over and over with the marking cotton until the letter is entirely covered.

In working monograms as much variety in the stitchery should be employed as can be conveniently managed. Where three letters are used, three different ways of marking will give a most elaborate effect to even the simplest of letters.

FRYEBURG.

Anne E. Eastman.

Anne Elizabeth Eastman, an aged resident of Fryeburg, died suddenly Tuesday afternoon July 5. She arose at the usual hour that morning and was apparently as well as ever. She remarked that she had a good night's rest and felt well. She prepared her breakfast as usual and at 8 o'clock commenced to partake of it, when she was stricken with a hemorrhage at the base of the brain. In a short time she became unconscious and sank rapidly until the end.

Miss Eastman was born in Concord, N. H., Feb. 19, 1827. She came to Fryeburg in early youth and had made her home in Maine for many years. She was the daughter of Capt. John Langdon Eastman, an intimate friend of the first President Harrison, and Mary Harrod (Osgood) Eastman. She was a direct descendent of Ebenezeer Eastman, one of the earliest settlers of Concord, N. H.

Miss Eastman for her age was in the enjoyment of good health, with the exception of some rheumatism; and even this did not confine her to the house for she was able to walk out every day. She retained all her mental faculties and her senses to a remarkable degree for one of her years.

She was very fond of the Bible and historical works. In her early womanhood she was a teacher and later spent many years in Boston. She was a Unitarian in religious faith and when in Boston was a constant attendant at the services held by Rev. Theodore Parker and later at the services of the Parker fraternity.

Miss Eastman belonged to a large family of 11 children, of whom only two are now living, John Langdon Eastman, a veteran of the G. A. R., and Mrs. Otis Warren, both of Fryeburg. She also leaves many nieces and nephews, and other relatives.

The funeral services were held from the church of the New Jerusalem at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, July 7, and were conducted by Rev. B. N. Stone, pastor of the church. They consisted of readings from the scripture, a prayer, a brief address and the reading of a favorite hymn, Come unto me, when shadows darkly gather. The floral tributes from friends were many and beautiful. The burial was in the family lot in the Main street cemetery, Fryeburg.

Death of a Prominent Maine Doctor.

Dr. Wallace K. Oakes of Auburn, an eminent physician and surgeon, died Friday evening at Poland Springs.

Dr. Oakes has been house physician at Poland Spring for several years. In June, Dr. Oakes removed his office to the Poland Spring House, attending to his general surgical practice elsewhere by brief absences from his duties at the Poland Spring House. Friday he was in Lewiston.

During the afternoon Dr. Oakes had been playing golf, as was his custom, eating a hearty supper and remarking during the evening that he had been feeling uncommonly well. About 10 o'clock, while in the office of the hotel, talking with guests, he suddenly started for his office, which is on the first floor near the main stairway. As the doctor approached his room he was seen to clap his hand to the back of his head near the base of the brain, heard him utter a quick cry of pain and fall upon the floor almost at the door of his room. Help was summoned at once. He was taken to his apartments by two of the proprietors. A physician was summoned but it was apparent that in spite of all efforts at resuscitation, Dr. Oakes had been dead for some time. Death was due to appoplexy,

Dr. Oakes was born in Auburn, Nov. 6, 1850, a son of Dr. Silvester and Hannah Eliza (Kilbourne) Oakes. His father was one of the early physicians of Androscoggin county, who went there more than 75 years ago, in the infancy of Auburn and became one of the leading physicians of Maine.

Dr. Oakes was educated in the Lewiston Falls academy, Auburn, where he graduated in 1865; entered Bowdoin college, graduating in the class of 1870; entered Columbia College Medical School, graduating in 1873 and became an interne in the Bellevue hospital in 1873 4, obtaining there a large experience, especially in the treatment of contagious and other diseases. He came to Auburn in 1874, associating with his father in the practice of medicine, and for the last 36 years has been constantly growing in public esteem as a physician and surgeon, not only in Auburn but all over the entire state of Maine.

Dr. Oakes was married Sept. 4, 1878, to Emma Dyer of Portland, who survives him.

The funeral was held at 2 30 Monday afternoon at Auburn, with brief services at the home, 60 High street, and a public service at the High street Congregational church.

Easy Divorce in Old Times.

The code of King Khammurabi of Assyria, whose date is approximately 2200 B. C., which has been disciphered from a pillar discovered at Susa, deals exhaustively with the subject of divorce. One of the most interesting clauses is the following: "If the wife of a man who dwells in the house of that man has set her face to go forth and has acted the fool and wasted his house and impoverished his house, they shall call her to account. If the husband shall say, 'I put her away,' he shall put her away. She shall go her way. For her divorce he shall give her nothing."

Trial and Sentencing of Animals.

A Glance Backward to the Middle Age.

Among the many curious customs of the past is recorded a singular feature of the jurisprudence of the middle ages, when animals were indicted for injuries inflicted upon human beings. The custom was not abolished in France until the middle of the 18th century, and the French court records show that at least 92 trials took place between 1120 and 1741.

There is some Biblical precedent for these proceedings, for in the 21st chapter of Exodus one finds, "If an ox gore a man or a woman that they die, then the ox shall be stoned and his flesh shall not be eaten."

An early instance of the custom was in 1314, when a bull escaped from a farmyard in a village in France in the duchy of Valois and gored a man to death. The Count of Valois, being informed of the case, directed that the bull be captured and formally prosecuted for homicide. This was done, and evidence was given by persons who had seen the man attacked and killed. The bull was thereupon sentenced to suffer death, which was inflicted by strangulation after which the carcass was suspended from a tree by the hind legs.

In 1396 a sow was executed in the square of Falaise for having caused the death of a child, and three years later a horse was condemned to death at Dijon for having killed a man. In 1457 a sow and her six young ones were tried at Lavegny on the charge of having killed and partially eaten a child. The sow was convicted and condemned to death but the little ones were acquitted on the ground of their extreme youth and inexperience, the bad example of their mother and absence of direct evidence of their having partaken of the atrocious feast.

One of the most grotesque of these trials took place in Basel when a farmyard cock was tried on the absurd charge of having laid an egg. It was contended in support of the prosecution that eggs laid by cocks were of inestimable worth for use in certain magical preparations, that a sorcerer would rather possess a cock's egg than the elixir of life and that Satan employed witches to hatch such eggs, from which proceeded serpents most dangerous to mankind.

The prisoner's advocate admitted the facts of the case but contended that no evil intention had been proved and that no evil result had taken place. Besides, the laying of an egg was an involuntary act and as such was not punishable by law; also there is no record of the devil having made a compact with an animal. The public prosecutor stated in reply that the evil one sometimes entered into animals, as in the case of the swine which drowned themselves in the sea of Galilee.

So the poor creature was convicted not as a cock, but as a sorcerer or perhaps the devil in the form of a cock, whereupon the bird and the egg that was attributed to it were solemnly burned at the stake.

Even stranger than this were the proceedings instituted in 1445 and 1487 against certain beetles which had made havoc in the vineyards of St. Julian. Advocates were named on behalf of the vine growers and beetles respectively, but by a singular coincidence the insects disappeared when cited to answer for the mischief they had done, and the proceedings were in consequence abandoned.

That was in 1445. In 1487, however, they reappeared and a complaint was thereupon addressed to the vicar general of the bishop of Maurienne, who named a judge and also an advocate to represent the beetles. A compromise was finally agreed upon, wherein the vine growers consented to cede the beetles certain fields to their exclusive use. Some time after the beetles, through their attorney, protested that there was a right of way through these fields which would be to their detriment. Consequently the case had to begin again but how it ended is not known, owing to the mutilation of the records—[New York Post.

Potato Growing.

When to Spray and How.

Begin when the tops are six or eight inches high and spray every ten days, every week if the weather is very cloudy and rainy, until the last of August or the first of September, or later if necessary.

In any event spraying must be begun some days before the average observer will detect blight on the leaves and the foliage should be kept well coated with Bordeaux Mixture up to the time the crop is harvested or the tops are killed by frost. Do not stop for rainy days; this is just the time when late blight spores are formed in profusion and when infection most easily takes place. It is possible for a spraying just before a rain, even though it is largely washed off, to do more actual good than any other during the season. Moreover, properly prepared Bordeaux Mixture, if thoroughly applied, will withstand washing if it once thoroughly dries on the leaves. Best results are obtained when the mixture is forcibly applied in the form of a fine mist, not in coarse drops sprinkled over the foliage.

Do not limit the amount applied per acre to an arbitrary number of gallons, use enough at each application to thoroughly coat the foliage whether it requires 50, 100, or 150 gallons per acre. Use a pump powerful enough to develop a pressure of at least 60 pounds with all the nozzles open.

Usually six and sometimes four sprayings are sufficient to protect against late blight, but the leaves should show a coating of Bordeaux from the time the spraying begins till the crop is harvested or the tops are killed by frost. One thorough spraying in rainy weather before late blight has gained a foothold may be the most effective application of the season. If early blight is prevalent five or six very thorough sprayings, beginning early in the season, are necessary to secure sufficient protection.

A $500 Challenge.

An interesting controversy is being indulged in on the Upper Lakes in connection with the relative speed of the SS "Hamonic" of the Northern Navigation Co., and the SS "Keewatin" of the C. P. Ry.

It is claimed by the latter that it has been demonstrated she could speed faster than the SS "Hamonic" and the Sarnia "Canadian" has challenged two of their contemporaries that the Steamer Hamonic, the first time she comes across either the "Keewatin" or the "Assiniboia" of the C. P. R. will pass these vessels and in good faith have deposited a certified cheque for $500.00.

If there were no birds man could not live on the earth, and birds are decreasing in this country.

Our Ideals.

Imagination is the special gift to humanity which, if properly directed and guarded, gives aspirations and high ideals. It is that qualification which distinguishes a person from the brute creation.

Show me a person with no power for imagination, no hopes, no aspirations, and I will show you a degenerate, or a weakling, without the power of well directed thought. There would be manifest more of the dull, monotonous "grid-grind" as of a slow, cumbrous machine, or the dull instincts which characterize the lower animals.

The power of imagination well guarded, stands for intelligence and the stronger the power to think the higher the state of intelligence to be sure.

As dreams show up to the sleeping mind realistic impressions:

"And dreams in their development have breath and fears, and tortures, and the touch of joy," so much more vividly does the waking mind mind bring forth in its imaginings correct thoughts and high ideals—Something to be desired and gained; Something to hope for and attain; Something to reach forward to, and hold within the grasp. And our hopes and aims are the mirrors of ourselves and are taken to the soul.

The awakened imagination sees in his mind's eye many wonderful things under the sun, and much that is to be desired. This is the better part of his dominion, and so, far away in his fancy he has his perfect creation—Beings more perfect than fairies in fairyland, and everything is beautiful and all his own cherished domain.

His ideals are at the zenith, his scope the horizon, from which he views his perfect and realistic creation above him, and, often, too often, must he awake to find he has not attained that for which he longs—his dreams prove false, yet, he cannot forget the promptings to aspire to something better yet than he has ever known, and he reaches forth to his ideals as the imprisoned morning glory creeps out through a chink and reaches its tiny tendrils onward and upward the sun which is its support, and its life, and all this is natural and wholesome.

Many whose lines are not cast in too pleasant places would lose courage and faint by the way had not God placed within the heart strong aspirations for that which is good and pleasant—a desire to bring out all that is best and fairest, and to array before his mind's eye his hopes and his longings while they turn into realites: resplendant as diamonds and the mid-day sun.

And so the ideal outvies the material, except it becomes materialized, and turns to wormwood, bitter to the taste.

Beecher says: "The soul without imagination is what an observatory would be without a telescope."

Imagination is the distinguishing element in all refinement. It is not merely grand, it is super-eminent. So, whatever the dreams, they show forth in the life, in attributes that accord therewith.

And no one is worse for having cherished guarded imaginations, which brings before the dreamer not "tears and tortures, and the touch of joy," but all the best and most refining influences of the human mind, and of the soul immortal.

Ah! we rejoice to know that aspirations which point to us our ideals, and beckon us on, do not always bear to us the crown of thorns but that many of our dearest hopes and impulses are realized, many palms are gathered for the present, and for the future.

Let us dream our bright dreams. Let us build our fairy-like castles even though they reach unto the clouds and return again to dust, if so soul and body are refreshed and purified through the experience of rearing them, for it is a pleasant incentive, and if at times our land of dreams seems vague and far off from the realization, we will not repine as those who have not seen these ideals, and lived in touch with their refining and ennobling influences. The mind is superior to the body. The ideal outlasts the material. While the raiment, food, place and wealth of people in past ages have long been forgotten, those things which seemed the most shadowy, their ideals, hopes and principles are living elements even to the present day.

So we live on hope, on that which seems unsubstantial and invisible; and we sink and perish while we depend merely on that which has no foundation, and is material.

As the sun's rays outshine the brightest sheen of a starlight sky, or, as the mid-day light exels the shades of night, so does the imagination with its aims, it hopes and high ideals rise above the material and sordid cunning of earth.

Teach Children to Protect Property.

Children should be taught to have a proper regard not only for the premises on which they live, but for that of others and in public spots, as school grounds, parks and parkways. If they are taught a proper appreciation of public trees and plants they will soon come to regard them as a personal possession, and but few children will destroy or injure that in which they have even a small joint ownership. "What is everybody's property is nobody's property" no longer applies.

"Did you ever hear of snakes in winter?"

"To be sure," replied the Billville matron. "My old man sees them the year round. They're a regular performin circus to him."—Atlanta Constitution.

Birds at Audubon's Grave.

There is a little scene of rural nature enacted every evening up on Washington Heights that can not be seen in any other thickly settled part of New York, says a contributor to the Humane Alliance. Thousands of swallows, which make their homes in the big chimney of a church, gather from every direction, about sunset, and circle aroud over Trinity cemetery, retiring gradually to their nest. At daybreak they rise from the chimney in clouds and scatter to all points of the compass. Residents of the neighborhood regard these flights with affectionate interest. As I stood near the cemetery the other evening, watching the gathering hosts of birds circling against the pale light of the sky, I noticed a white-haird old man leaning against a tree and gazing upward. From north and south, east and west, flocks of the graceful birds were arriving every moment to join the swirling multitudes. There are literally thousands of them, swooping in a wide circle over the silent graveyard and filling the air with plaintive cries. Suddenly the old man addressed me.

"What a beautiful sight that is," he said. "I have watched these flights for years. During the summer the birds come every evening about six o'clock and for an hour or more fly in that awift circle over-head before seeking rest."

"Why have they chosen this spot?" I asked.

"It has been their haunt for many years," said the old man. I like to think it is because their friend sleeps yonder. Can you see that monument?"

He pointed with his stick through the massive iron fence that surrounds the cemetery. Through the gathering dusk I could make out a great white cross, on a high pedestal, glimmering in the twilight.

"That is in memory of Audubon," said the old man. "On one side of that cross are the sculptured forms of many birds and just a block away is the old mansion where the great naturalist lived.

"Every evening in summer the swallows wing their swift way from New Jersey, Westchester and Long Island, and swing in that strang circle over the tomb of the naturalist and within sight of the place where he lived and worked. It seems as though it were a ceremony before a shrine."

Overhead the birds still swirled in a swift circle, and the darkening graveyard lay silent but for the soft rustling of the leaves. Suddenly one of the swallows widened the circle and a hundred swung out after him. The twittering cries grew fainter and stopped. The first detachment circled toward the chimney of the Church of St. Cartherine of Genoa, and dropped into it one by one. They had not all disappeared when another company swept out of the circle and vanished. Rapidly the host grew less until finally the last of the birds had darted over and fluttered into the nest. The old man walked away slowly. All was darkness beyond the iron gates, and silence.

Teaching Teams to Pull.

It is a real pleasure to have a team that can be relied upon to pull whenever wanted to do so. Any team, if not of a too highly nervous temperament, may be trained to perfect reliability. We need first of all to recognize that the horse has a mind and at least the mental qualities of memory and affection. The consideration of paramount importance is to develop the team's confidence in themselves and in their driver.

It is just as true of a horse as of a man, that he will not exert himself greatly over what he has no hope of accomplishing. But different from man, the horse thinks of previous loads instead of the one to which he is attached. This is the reason a balky horse is apt to refuse to pull a very light load. He has no way of estimating his load only by pulling upon it.

Hitch a horse to a very heavy load and let him pull upon it, and then transfer him to an empty wagon and start him. You will see him gather himself for a heavy pull. He has in mind the heavy load. Had the horse been stalled with a heavy load, and whipped until driver and horse were both certain he could not pull it, you would have a horse thoroughly broken not to pull.

One writer says: "I have seen men who had horses given to pulling upon the halter put one on the puller they were confident the horse could not break, and then whip him over the head in order to make him pull. Nearly always when a horse finds he cannot pull loose he will walk up to the hitching post. I have heard men argue that a horse could be so thoroughly broken in this way that a tow string would hold him."

There is some truth in it, though not all horses are to be managed in the same way. A horse of nervous temperament should never be excited. He will always do his best in a perfectly calm state of mind. The drivers of fast trotters have taught us this. They have also learned that to keep the horse calm all men in attendance must remain so.

No passionate, profane man ever developed great speed in a horse nor trained a powerful pulling team. With these general principles in view, any team may be trained so that it will be a delight to work them. Have a definite and small vocabulary to use with your team, and always use the same word for one purpose. Keep the same two horses working together and always on the same side.

Use open bridles, so that the team can see what is going on around them. Keep all attachments strong, that your team will not be in fear of straining themselves through something breaking. Use close-fitting collars and harness, and never allow a horse to become sore from any part of the harness.

Teach your team to start together. Keep them strong and in good spirits by good and regular feeding, and good care in every particular. Let them come to heavy pulling gradually, and not at all until their bones are well matured.

Mighty Little Inducement.

A lawyer, a very immoral man, was dead. This lawyer was a bad husband, a bad father, bad neighbor and generally a bad man morally, though he had been very successful in his profession. For the funeral a new preacher in the town was selected so that he would not know just what kind of a man the lawyer had been.

The preacher arrived and asked a man standing by, who was pretty much of a wag, what sort of man the lawyer had been. The wag lauded the lawyer to the skies. The preacher believed all he said, arose and prouounced a poetic eulogy of the departed barrister. When he had heard all he could stand to hear without unburdening himself to some one present, the judge of the court in that town leaned over to a lawyer who sat beside him and remarked:

"Well, there's mighty little inducement for a really good man to die in this town now."

Bound for the frozen north on a secret mission the Canadian government steamer Artic, Capt. Bernier, sailed July 7. There is greater significance to the trip than is generally supposed. The steamer is sailing under sealed orders, but enough is known to say that among other things, an attempt will be made to navigate the northwest passage to find out if the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific is possible for ships of any size. Several years ago the passage was negotiated by Capt. Edmundson in the Golden Horn, for the Norwegian government. Capt Burnier will try it again before he leaves the north land for Canada. The Artic carries supplies for two years.

The Difference.

One who frequents the hotels of the state cannot fail to observe several things, some of which are quite interesting, even if not very exciting. One of the noticeable things is the difference in the way in which the different houses are conducted, especially the amount of help employed to do a very little. It is never safe to think you can judge of the amount of business done by the number employed in the office. We often stop at a small house where the proprietor deems it necessary to employ two full grown clerks.

At another house doing twice the business, and taking even better care of their patrons, the proprietor and a boy run the office and drive the depot carriage, and in some cases care for the stable. Again we find a man and his wife doing all, and doing it well. In such cases you always see the proprietor on your arrival as well as your departure, while the house that supports two or three clerks lets its proprietor go to picture shows in the evening, and you never see him in the morning until nearly noon. He goes about the house with an air of "you need not stop with me if you do not want to. I didn't invite you."

The man who gives you the glad hand on your arrival and bids you a pleasant journey and quick return at your departure regardless of the hour, usually has plenty of time to have a good garden and keeps a cow or two that his guests may have far better and fresher fare than the market affords. The two clerk man rarely has time to get any rarities for his table, but takes it out in blaming the markets for not being better supplied. His guests eat prunes in the berry time, and red herring in lieu of lobster, even though his house overhangs the waters of the briny deep.

The more clerks the less you may expect from them. A single illustration. Two busy traveling men arose the other morning to catch a six o'clock train. No breakfast was expected but a carriage for the depot was promised by the proprietor the night before. The travelers appeared in the office in due time and waited for the carriage. None appeared and when they seemed to be getting uneasy the clerk told them not to get nervous, and he set an example of composure by lighting a cigarette. The travelers struck out and by helping to harness the belated hack team reached the depot in time for the train. They only regretted that they had not had time to set the hotel office to rights before their hurried departure, and thus save the overworked clerk.

That very night these two men reached another kind of stopping place. The proprietor greeted them in person and put them to bed and called them to a six o'clock breakfast in the morning. It is not often that travelers get such widely different treatment in a single twenty-four hours.

The Varying Calls of Birds.

One of the most interesting features in the study of bird life is to note their varying calls in the changing circumstance of sunshine and storm.

The frequent snowfalls of the recent winter have often been heralded by the mournful "cluck, cluck," of the blackbirds as they flocked round the doors looking for the crumbs that custom had led them to expect. The mavis is mostly mute during a storm, and tells his tale of woe more by his ruffled feathers and drooping wing than by his voice. His note, however, is the first to welcome a change to warmer weather.

The stormcock, by which is meant the blue felt or fieldfare does not frequent the habitation of man, but there is no more certain sign of the approach of severe weather than a flock of these birds flying southward. Their note is an ominus "chuck, chuck," and but for that they would often pass unnoticed overhead.

The sdylark also passes south, uttering a timid, twittering note, which will later give place to a gay burst of song. The starlings flock greedily to wherever food is to be found, be it in field or homestead. The first blink of warm sunshine, however, will see them perched on the eaves vibrating their wings in a manner no other bird does and imitating with an air of intense satisfaction the call notes of a host of other birds.

The sparrows which robbed the farmer in the autumn, flock townward in winter, and their cheerless twitter on the housetops bears faint resemblance to their noisy clamor in the cornfield. The robin seeks his dole with an air of quiet confidence and sometimes rewards us with a burst of song quite out of keeping with his surroundings. The blue tits have no voice to say they are hungry, though their actions show it, but their spring note may be heard in the woodlands, when they forsake our doors for the field and hedgerow.

Old Embroideries.

Used Under Glass They Make Handsome Trays and Vase Holders.

Many girls have bits of old embroideries that have come down to them thorough the years. If not samplers which are framed and hung, they will be probably packed.

Why not use them under glass to make handsome trays, coasters or vase holders, now so much in demand?

One girl who owns 14 medallions in Oriental coloring, embroidered on white satin, and used by her greatgrandmother in a frock long since worn out, has converted them into 14 coasters, covered with glass and framed with a narrow mahogany rim.

Frames can be bought in several sizes and the work done at home, or they can be framed at a small cost. It is well to mount embroidery first on pieces of cardboard that will fit easily in frame. The bottoms of coasters should be pasted with green felt, to avoid scratching the polished table.

Old centerpieces worked in silks can be framed in glass and wood for bedroom trays. Pieces with huge pink and red roses are especially good.

Odd pieces of Oriental embroideries, which seafaring ancestors delighted to bring home; quaint birds and peacocks with flaring tails, laboriously worked by our grandmothers into old pieces of tapestry, can all be used in this way.

One girl made a dainty tray for a pink and white bedroom by putting in a white enamel frame an exquisite piece of cutwork embroidery worked by an ancestor. It was yellowed with age, so it was used over rose silk, and looked better under glass than would a pure white.

The State Grange will hold its next meeting at Augusta the third week in December, commencing Tuesday, Dec. 20, and a feature will be a reception to be tendered the visitors by the citizens of Augusta. The next meeting of the executive committee will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 4 and 5.

Report of Directors for the Year Ending in June.

The report of the directors of the Maine Sanatorium at Hebron for the year ending in June 1910, has been given out. The report is as follows:

The total number of patients admitted during the year was 217; total number discharged 157, remaining in the Sanatorium 60. Result of treatment of the 157 discharged show 22 were incipient cases. One of these remained less than five weeks, the remaining 21 showing the most wonderful result from treatment. 35 were improved, 9 remained unchanged and 29 were progressive. Three died.

Twenty patients gained between 15 and 20 pounds in weight; 12 between 20 and 25 pounds; 6 between 25 and 30 pounds; 7 between 35 and 40 pounds; one over 45 pounds. Average gain in weight of all patients, counting both those who lost and gained, nine pounds. The average length of residence for the incipient patients 23 weeks, moderately advanced patients 26 weeks. The number of office calls made 2,491; number of visits made to bed patients 3,699; number of throat treatments, 1,482; number of tuberculin treatments, 2,752.

The result of treatment in the early cases shows the advantage of getting patients early. This is one of our greatest difficulties at the Sanatorium. If all patients could be gotten in the early stage at least ninety per cent could be returned to their homes with many years of useful life before them. No doubt some of them will relapse but the gain will be great and makes the Sanatorium treatment economically justifiable.

The Medical Director has during the past year made every effort to spread a wider knowledge of the Sanatorium by giving lectures throughout the State descriptive of the work the Sanatorium is doing and the need of early diagnosis of the disease, and especially to give a better knowledge of the prevention of tuberculosis.

We have also during the past year published a little paper with which you are all familiar, with the idea of spreading a wider knowledge of the tuberculosis cause. Five hundred of these copies are sent out each month and are doing much good.

Summer Cruises in the Northern Seas.

In connection with the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific Steamships on the Pacific Coast on June 12th, the company has issued a very handsome and interesting booklet describing the new boats and the scenic grandeur of the trip from Seattle, Victoria or Vancouver to Prince Rupert.

There are thirty-two pages of text matter, full of information and new material, carefully prepared after a recent trip over the route. The publication is profusely illustrated with Grand Trunk plates made from direct photographs, and include pictures of the new boats, scenes in Seattle, Victoria, Vancouver and Prince Rupert, forest scenes on Vancouver Island, Indian villages on the route, pictures of the majestic scenery of the inside channel and a series of beautiful scenes on the Skeena River. In addition there are diagrams of the steamships and a new and complete map of the North Pacific Coast, showing in a clear way the steamship route.

The cover of the booklet is a striking one, printed in four colors.

Copies of this publication can be had free on application to J. Quinlan, D. P. A., Montreal.

Names of Fabrics.

Nearly all of the fabrics derive their names from some city or country, and the four quarters of the globe are represented.

Muslin is named from Mosul, a city on the banks of the Tigris, in Asia. Cambric comes from Cambrai, a city in France. Gauze is from Gaza, in Syria. Damask is from Damascus, in Syria. Silk and serge are both from Latin Seres, meaning the Chinese. These fabrics came from that portion of Asia which is now Southern China. Calico first came from Calicut, a town in India, which was once celebrated for its cotton cloth. Alpaca comes from the animal of the same name in Peru.

Sanford Sailed for Foreign Ports.

Nothing has been seen of the Shiloh bark Kingdom, since early Saturday morning and it is believed she has sailed for some foreign port. The last of the baggage stored at South Freeport was taken on Saturday morning.

The Kingdom has been lying off Portland for about a week, but has never approached within the 3-miles limit of the shore. While at Halifax some 12 weeks ago she took on about $2000 worth of stores, and while from 50 to 75 of Sanford's disciples from Shiloh have embarked on the boat.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. L. Chase of Paris are to move to Hingham, Mass., to take charge of the Brewer estate or the place commonly known as the "World's End Farm."

The Modern Farming special sent out over the lines of the Maine Central railroad and its subsidiary roads, visited some ten of the sixteen of the counties of the state, traveled some 1000 miles and presented for inspection the five well-equipped cars and reached by word of mouth some 18,000 people, with the lessons to be taught of modern farming methods.

A good covering for an ironing board is cotton-batting covered so tightly with muslin that it cannot roll into ridges. It should have 5 or 6 thickness of muslin over it, the last one being removable, so it may be washed often. This makes a good, springy surface, and easy to iron on.

Patriotic Celebration.

The dance at the Grange hall the 4th under the auspices of the Grangers was a decided success. There a good sized crowd in the afternoon and an unusually large crowd in the evening, over fifty couples being on the floor in the grand march. The music by Garcelon's orchestra was first-class.

At six o'clock supper was served consisting of cold meat, salads, bread and butter, pastry, and hot coffee. Nuts, fruit, confectionary, ice cream and lemonade were on sale afternoon and evening.

The hall was prettily dedicated with bunting, flags, liberty bells, wreaths of evergreen and flowers. It was a real patriotic celebration of our National holiday and every one seemed to have a good time.

HIRAM.

Caused a Stir.

Walter Spring, who caused this town's people and others so much trouble, has left the state and several are hoping he never will return.

For a year or more he had been getting up things he called patents, a window screen, oil can and a wheel hub for which he gave the public to believe he got patented and sold them for about sixty thousand dollars. People about here supposed and really believed every word of it was true.

First he went to Portland and bought a large touring car, thirty horse power, said to have paid seventeen hundred dollars for it. He took the car to Hiram and run it for over two thousand miles, bought much of his supplies on credit, it was reported, and that all his money was in the bank and being a minor he could not get it without a consent from his father. He got his oil in many places, telling numerous stories to the public, who had great confidence in him. He kept growing from bad to worse. He told so many things, that people began to think there was something about him which was not just right. In Brownfield and Portland he got money, clothing and other things.

After a while they took his car away, and it is reported he paid fifty dollars down and agreed to pay as soon as he got his father's consent to draw money from the bank, but that as yet has not come around as far as we know. Many here tried to get their pay by asking him and telling him unless he paid he had laid himself liable getting things under false pretences.

The doctors are laying low this hot weather, as every one seems to be enjoying good health.

Of late there has been many guests at Brookside Farm. Mrs. Neal Farewell and her daughter Anna from Cumberland Centre, came up to the farm Saturday, and remained till after the Fouth.

The hay crop will be large. One man said he took nine two-horse loads from one and a half acres. Clover seemed at have dominated over other grasses, so there is over an abundance of it this year.

There is lots of business on the Mountain division of the Maine Central R. R., this summer, sixteen trains running daily. There is some talk of their putting in another track, as their business increases every year.

Hot, dry weather here with the mercury in the nineties, and everything is drying up fast. People have commenced to hay and where the grass has been cut it looks as though fire had run over the land. Fountains and wells are going dry, and if we don't get a deep rain soon everything must suffer.

OXFORD.

Word has been received of the safe arrival in Italy of Lina Carr, after having a very pleasant passage. Miss Carr sailed from New York for a trip abroad June 21st. The itinerary includes Italy, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France, England, and the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

Grand Trunk Wins.

The Grand Trunk Railway has been granted permission by the railroad commission to extend its proposed line to Providence, R. I.

By allowing the Grand Trunk to extend its line from Palmer, Mass., to the Rhode Island state line that company has obliterated its missing link in New England.

With the entering of the Grand Trunk Co. in Rhode Island that state will have direct railroad communication with the west, thereby greatly increasing the valuation of property in that state.
